PINK SANDS HOTEL

Not every celebrity who visits Harbour Island stays at the Pink Sands Hotel. Bill Gates, for instance, has his own home on the island. But Keith Richards has checked in here, as have Martha Stewart and Kate Moss. Ever since it opened in the 1950s, the 25-room hotel, like the island itself, has been a low-key enclave of the rich and famous, drawn not just by the like-attracts-like vibe (one of the previous owners was Island Records founder and Bob Marley “discoverer” Chris Blackwell), but by its location, on Pink Sands Beach, which many have called one of the world’s prettiest. Accommodations are in one- and two-room cottages. Each exterior is painted in a soft Caribbean shade, but the interiors have a Moroccan-Asian style.
